With 27 years of experience in education, she is a dedicated educator and school leader committed to empowering students, supporting teachers, and strengthening the school community. Her career reflects a longstanding passion for literacy, educational excellence, student development, and creating opportunities for young people to reach their full potential.

She began her career at Caddo Middle Career and Technology School, where she spent 15 years as an English Language Arts teacher, educating students in grades 6–8. Her years in the classroom provided her with firsthand experience in developing students' literacy skills, encouraging academic growth, and helping young people build the confidence needed to succeed both inside and outside the classroom.

After 15 years of classroom teaching, she transitioned into school administration and has served as an Assistant Principal for 12 years. For the past five years, she has proudly served as an Assistant Principal at Huntington High School, where she continues to support students, teachers, families, and the broader school community through instructional leadership, mentorship, and advocacy.

Her extensive background in English Language Arts and educational leadership makes her service with G.L.O.W. Literacy Initiative, Inc. (Girls Learning, Overcoming, and Winning) especially meaningful. As a member of the G.L.O.W. Board of Directors, she brings invaluable knowledge of literacy instruction, student development, educational leadership, and the academic and social needs of young people.

In her role with G.L.O.W., she is committed to helping shape programs that strengthen reading and writing skills while encouraging girls to become confident learners and emerging leaders. Her educational expertise will help ensure that G.L.O.W.'s literacy and enrichment initiatives remain student-centered, academically meaningful, and responsive to the needs of girls in grades 1–8. She also serves as an important connection between G.L.O.W.'s mission and the educational community, helping the organization identify opportunities to support students, families, educators, and schools throughout the Shreveport-Bossier area.

Beyond her professional career, she is devoted to faith and family. She is married to Shawn Franklin and is the proud mother of two children, Shawn, a senior at Grambling State University, and Ti'Anna, a freshman at Huntington High School. She is also a member of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Incorporated and Peaceful Rest Baptist Church.

Her passion for education, leadership, family, and service aligns naturally with the mission of G.L.O.W. Through her board service, she looks forward to helping create a supportive environment where girls can strengthen their literacy skills, discover their voices, develop confidence, embrace leadership, and realize their potential as Girls Learning, Overcoming, and Winning.
